

The Steps Program Event Series

The Steps Program is the Environment Institute of Australia and New Zealand's (EIANZ) training program for early career practitioners.

Aligned with the Institute's mission to lead excellence in environmental practice, the Steps Program plays an integral role in building the knowledge and skills of environmental professionals, providing a pathway to skilled and ethical practice and potential certification

Events have been designed by leading environmental practitioners and experienced training providers. Each event combines theoretical knowledge and real life case studies or presentations by industry professionals, providing practical skills which can be directly applied in the workplace.

Professional Writing

Moving from the world of academic writing to the real world of environmental practice requires a specific set of skills in learning to communicate with the public, agencies, clients and within your organisation. Creating the foundations of great written communication early in your career is vital to success as an ethical environmental professional and will serve you in all aspects of your working life.

This event builds skills in the delivery of effective, clear and concise written communication, tailored to a range of audiences. Participants will:

- + Explore and understand how to competently complete high quality written reports, project planning, assessment and evaluation
- + Practice converting complex environmental information into simple communications
- + Learn how to tailor your writing for specific tasks and audiences

The event includes case studies, local experts, tools and templates and will change the way you look at writing forever.

About the training provider: Dr Su Wild-River, MIEANZ, CVEnP

Dr Su Wild-River has 24 years professional experience in researching and applying practical solutions to environmental problems, with a current focus on sustainability initiatives. Su is a visiting fellow at the Centre for the Public Awareness of Science at the Australian National University, training new generations of scientists to become skilled communicators who can engage people with science and technology.
