Natural Resource Management – Enabling Prosperity in the Peel-Harvey Catchment

How is NRM in the Peel-Harvey Catchment enabling prosperity? What does it mean to be an environmental professional in 2019? Come listen to two inspirational organisational leaders involved in NRM who will share their perspectives from a regional and state level.

About the speakers

Jane O'Malley has been CEO for the Peel-Harvey Catchment Council since 2010, helping it grow from a sub-region of the South West to an independent Region with a team of 26 amazing professional practitioners. Jane is a WA Parks Ambassador, sits on the Board of the Mandurah Performing Arts Centre and has a self recognised travel disorder, which continues to take her to amazing places around the globe.

Mike Rowe is the Director General of the Department of Water and Environmental Regulation in Western Australia, established on 1 July 2017. His experience spans a number of natural resources management portfolios such as agriculture, environment and water, as well as central agencies including the Public Sector Commission and the Department of the Premier and Cabinet.
